Course Information and Programme

Course Information

The Phase 2 course is part of the continual professional development (CPD) for road safety professionals. The Phase 2 course fits within the following training process:

- Phase 1 In-house training conducted over the first 6 to 9 months of on-job experience;
- Phase 2 A five-day intensive residential Course;
- Phase 3 A series of one to two day modules for more experienced staff covering topics of particular interest in depth.

Who Should Attend Phase 2 Course?

The course is designed for those Road Safety Officers who have completed Phase 1 training, or who have achieved a comparable level of knowledge and experience (6 to 12 months on-job experience).

On each course a small number of places are available to police officers, military personnel, engineers, and delegates from overseas. Experience has shown that these groups benefit not only from the professional input of tutors but also from the opportunity to discuss common professional interests with other delegates.

Course Aims

- To assist delegates to reduce the incidence and severity of road traffic crashes, by providing a deeper understanding of the approaches available to them;
- To provide delegates with the knowledge, skills and understanding relevant to the fulfilment of their professional roles;
- To provide the opportunity to network and reflect with other road safety practitioners on approaches to casualty reduction.

Overview

Delegates are encouraged to learn through participation, rather than merely listening to others talking. The modules consist of a combination of formal lectures and practical activities. The sessions include discussions, group work, and role play.

Speakers

In addition to experienced trainers from TMS Consultancy and RSN Associates, tutors are drawn from road safety professionals working in local authorities as well as the private sector. All speakers have specialist knowledge of road safety and related issues.
